Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 1 and 3 are finally rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Sperry et al. (US 6,253,919) in view of Hollingsworth et al (US 6,334,534). Sperry et al. discloses a box with an inflatable cushion 10, 450,510. The inflatable cushion has a valve that connects the outside of the box through a hollow lumen. The hollow lumen is the portion on the top half of element 16. The filling medium is air. Sperry et al. disclose generally all of the elements of claims, but does not show the attachment means. However, Hollingsworth et al. suggests, for example, a cushion with fastener elements 52 to attach the cushion to the interior surface of a case. It would therefore have been an obvious modification in view of Hollingsworth to provide the fastener members for the inflatable packing material to attach the packing material to an interior surface of the container to prevent unwanted movement.

Response to Arguments

3. Applicant's arguments filed on 3/17/03 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. Applicant argues on page 1 that Sperry does not disclose an inflatable lining that is attached to the inside of a box. But Sperry is not being applied alone in the rejection. Hollingsworth et al suggests an attachment mechanism that is the only feature missing in Sperry. Sperry clearly teaches an inflatable packaging material used to fill void regions in containers carrying articles for shipment. It contains an outer box 64 with bottom closing flaps made out of rigid material with an inflatable cushions 10,450,510 situated within the box. Notice that cushion 450 covers inside walls by portions 454,452 and cover a bottom wall by portion 456. A valve assembly 16,451,516 is mounted in an opening in the wall of the box. The opening is flush with an outer surface 75 of wall 64. After the top flaps are closed, the inflatable packaging material is inflated through the valve 16 with an inflating system. It is evident that the structural features in Sperry et. al. correspond to what is being claimed except for the attachment. Hollingsworth is an appropriate motivational reference for the attachment because it is a cushion for use in a carrying case. The attachments allow the user to adjust the location of the cushion and to stabilize the cushion around the article. Also with regard to Hollingsworth, the examiner is only relying the simple hooks and loops attachment to the interior of a carrier and not its additional structural feature.

Applicant's argument concerning the multiple steps and requirements in Sperry does not obviate over the rejection. The claim does not limit extra structural elements within the valve assembly nor the entire invention of Sperry.

In response to applicant's argument that the examiner's conclusion of obviousness is based upon improper hindsight reasoning, it must be recognized that any judgment on obviousness is in a sense necessarily a reconstruction based upon hindsight reasoning. But so long as it takes into account only knowledge which was within the level of ordinary skill at the time the claimed invention was made, and does not include knowledge gleaned only from the applicant's disclosure, such a reconstruction is proper. See In re McLaughlin, 443 F.2d 1392, 170 USPQ 209 (CCPA 1971).

Applicant's other arguments have been considered but they are also found unpersuasive to overcome the instant rejection.

Conclusion

4. THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
